Confidence Is Necessary to Our Prosperity

Enthusiasm for Future Is Widespread Due to Efficient Administration at Washington—Savings Banks and Life Insurance Policies.

(By A. Erskine, President, The Studebaker Corporation.)

Written for the International News Service.

New York, Dec. 21.—The outstanding industrial and commercial developments of the year 1925 were enormous, building construction, automobile production and railroad traffic and earnings. Industries generally operated on a big scale and made large profits, excepting perhaps the railroad equipment and textile concerns.

We enter 1926 under most favorable economic conditions, with tax reduction and foreign debt ratification about to be approved by congress. With a remarkably efficient administration at Washington which commands the respect and confidence of the nation, enthusiasm for the future is widespread. After all, confidence is necessary to all business activity and national prosperity. The United States is in a most fortunate position in nearly all respects, and business cannot but help reflect it.

Savings Banks Figures.

The prosperity of the people of the United States since the end of the great war has amazed the world. The increasing deposits in the savings banks are only partial evidence of that fact. Figures supplied by the comptroller of the currency show for the decade from 1914 to 1924 the number of savings banks in the United States decreased from 2,100 to 1,603 but the number of depositors increased from 11 to 14,000,000 the total deposit from 4.9 to 8.4 billions and the average amount per depositor from $444 to $605.

Insurance Policies.

Life insurance policies outstanding increased during the same decade from 39 to 86 millions to the amount of insurance from 21 to 64 billions of dollars, and the average policy from $545 to $742. The country is prosperous and the standard of living higher than at any previous time in its history. No one wants to go back to the pre-war condition of output, wages and living standards.

Coolidge Message To Boys and Girls

Washington, Dec. 21.—Work and play in the great outdoors were extolled to American youths today by President Coolidge in a Christmas message to the boys and girls of the land.

The greeting, addressed specifically to the Boy Scouts, Lone Scouts and the Four-H Club, said:

"As you are representative of the organization of the boys and girls of America who live in or are interested in the open country, with which I come into an official relation, I want to extend to all of you a Christmas greeting. It seems a very short time ago that I was a boy and in the midst of farm life myself having to do the chores of the barn, working in the corn and potato field, getting in the hay, and in the springtime in doing what most of you have never had an opportunity to see—making maple sugar.

"There is a time for play as well as a time for work."

The Ticem Club Incorporates

A certificate of incorporation of the Ticem Club, Inc., approved by Supreme Court Justice G. D. B. Hasbrouck, has been filed with Florence E. S. Knapp, secretary of state, and a copy filed with the Ulster county clerk. It is a membership corporation under the membership corporation law of New York state. The objects of the corporation are to maintain a common place of meeting for duly qualified members, and to promote sociability among members, guests and patrons. The territory within which its operations are to be conducted is the city of Kingston. The directors for the first year are William H. Whitaker, 17 Liberty street; James J. Castor, 7 Washington avenue; Kenneth Taylor, 129 Pearl street. Besides the above, who signed the articles of incorporation are Julius Tillier and James H. Constable.

CONGRESS WILL PROBE FOREIGN MONOPOLIES

Washington, Dec. 21.—Foreign monopolies that are engaged in "holding up" American consumers in a number of raw materials such as rubber and coffee, are to be investigated by congress.

The investigation was ordered today by the house and will be conducted by the interstate and foreign commerce committee.

The scope of the investigation was broadened to include rubber, coffee, silk, nitrates, sisal, potash, cotton, iodine, tin, quicksilver, pulp wood and a few products of lesser importance. The committee was directed to investigate means and methods of control of production and exportation.

Tax Reduction Fight in Senate

Democrats and Progressives May Form New Tax Coalition and Battle For Greater Reduction—Bill Will Be Hurried Through.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Opposition to the $325,000,000 tax reduction bill, enacted by the house, was slowly crystallizing in the senate today with Democrats and Progressives apparently ready to form a new tax coalition.

If the history of the 1924 tax fight is repeated, the Democrats and Progressives will unite to toss the house income tax rates into the discard while writing into law their own program of tax reduction on incomes. The fight will be staged around the amount of total reduction to be given the American people, with the coalition probably battling for a $100,000,000 greater reduction in taxes than the relief provided by the house.

The Democrats, at least, will draft a substitute bill, either as a separate measure or in the form of amendments to the house bill. This will be sponsored by Senator Simmons, Democrat, of North Carolina, author of the present income rates which were written into the 1924 bill after the Mellon plan was defeated. This year, however, the Democrats will not oppose heavy reductions on surtaxes and may even accept the 20 per cent maximum fixed by the house, but will direct their efforts toward lowering normal taxes through higher exemptions and to spreading the tax reduction evenly through the lower surtax brackets.

Senate Democrats incidentally have shown much dislike for the attitude of house Democrats, who supported the Republican tax program. In the senate, the minority leaders will raise an issue of greater relief for the people and greater relief for the middle class business man. As an instance, it was learned, the Democrats will support a move to sharply reduce the taxes on incomes between $11,000 and $44,000 which they maintain were "missed" by the house.

Despite their opposition to the house bill, both the Democrats and Progressives will join with administration leaders in hurrying the bill through to final enactment before March 15, when the new income tax returns are due. Tax hearings will begin before the senate finance committee on January 4 and last two weeks. The bill then will be brought out on the floor of the senate and kept there, except for more pressing matter, until finally enacted.

Postmaster at Haverstraw Shot

Haverstraw, N. Y., Dec. 21.—Mysteriously shot through the head as he entered his room in the post office here today, Postmaster George J. Howard admitted being shot by a man, but refused to name his assailant.

Howard has been postmaster for three years and is one of the town's most respected citizens. Clerks were busy in the general office when he opened the door of his private office and the shot rang out.

The revolver, however, lay fifteen feet from Howard's body. No hope is entertained for his recovery.

ABANDON HOPE OF FINDING MISS CORBETT.

Northampton, Mass., Dec. 21.—Detectives searching for Miss Alice M. Corbett, 19, missing Smith College junior, today gave up all hope of finding the girl.

James H. Corbett, wealthy Utica, N. Y., manufacturer, had hurried from his home to Albany, N. Y., when a girl answering Miss Corbett's description was picked up by the Albany police. The girl held in Albany was not his daughter, Mr. Corbett found.

Miss Corbett's mother, who remained in Utica and whose hope of again seeing her daughter alive rose when her husband left for Albany, collapsed when informed over the telephone that the girl in Albany was not Alice.

EXPEDITION TO PROVE STEFANSSON'S THEORY

Oslo, Norway, Dec. 21.—A sledge expedition under the command of Storkerson, one of Stefansson's lieutenants, will set out early this summer from the islands of New Siberia and cross the unexplored Polar regions lying between there and the North American archipelago, in the Bering Sea.

Storkerson's object will be to prove Stefansson's theory that life exists throughout the Polar basin.

Church Porch Collapsed Sunday

At the close of the children's Christmas exercises in the Franklin Street A. M. E. Zion Church Sunday evening, which were largely attended, the church porch collapsed when the congregation began to pass out of the building, but fortunately no one was injured and the doors were quickly closed to prevent further exit and the congregation left the church by the basement doors. A new porch had been built on the church only two years ago.

According to members of the congregation a close watch is being kept on the main church structure as a collapse of the building is feared. For that reason the church is not planning any large church function until a new church is erected. Plans for the new edifice are now in the hands of the architect and a city wide drive will be staged in March to raise funds to pay for the erection of the proposed new church.

The Rev. E. O. Clarke, pastor of the church, believes that the present church building is in no immediate danger of collapsing but states that no chances will be taken as the building has been condemned. He also states that he will ask for an official examination of the building by the city authorities.

Enrollment Shows Decrease of 1,089

The staff of clerks who have been busy for some time at the office of the Ulster county board of elections compiling the names of enrolled voters have completed their work, which shows a total enrollment in the county of 25,387 voters.

The enrollment by political parties is as follows:

Republicans	15,643
Democrats	9,685
Socialists	59

The enrollment in 1924 was 26,476, of whom 17,914 were Republicans, 8,393 were Democrats and 169 were Socialists. In 1922 the total enrollment was 26,063, of whom 17,134 were Republicans, 8,848 were Democrats and 81 were Socialists.

The enrollment this year shows a decrease of 2,271 Republicans from last year, an increase of 1,292 Democrats and a decrease of 110 Socialists.

The total enrollment this year is 1,089 less than last year and 676 less than in 1923.

"Dry" Head Dismissed.

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 21.—James Ryan, head of the dry forces in the Albany district, has been dismissed by Major Eugene C. Roberts, prohibition administrator of northern and western New York district. Ryan was appointed from here less than a month ago. His administration of the Albany office was unsatisfactory.

Mitchell Tells Navy It Failed In Aircraft

Despite Protests of Counsel Colonel Mitchell Testifies at Naval Court Asserting That Navy Failed To Develop Rigid Airships.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Debonair and defiant, Colonel William Mitchell told the navy to its face today that it had made a failure of its effort to develop rigid aeroplanes.

Drawn before the hostile naval court of inquiry investigating the Shenandoah crash after many delays, and testifying against the advice of counsel, Mitchell asserted that America had no operating rigid airships and that the agreement between the army general staff and the navy general board, whereby the navy was to have the field for rigid aircraft development was "wholly unsatisfactory."

Failure, Says Mitchell.

Major Henry Leonard, the court judge advocate, endeavored to show at the outset that Mitchell's ideas on aircraft were different from those of General Pershing, and to show also that operating rigid type ships was the navy's business, not the army's, nor necessarily the air service's.

"Is it not a fact," said Leonard, "that the joint army-navy board, of which General Pershing was a member, authorized the navy to develop dirigibles?"

"Yes," said Mitchell, "but the navy has made a failure of it. There is not one in operation."

Mitchell said that while assistant Chief of the army air service he planned a monster dirigible capable of carrying 18 air planes on a trans-Atlantic flight.

"I told the experts what we needed an airship for and they did the designing," said Mitchell.

"Did you take part in actually designing airships for the navy?"

"No, we had experts for that."

A Difficult Witness.

Mitchell proved a difficult witness for the judge advocate to handle because, taking a leaf from the general staff officers who testified against him at his trial, he insisted on answering questions in his own way, and this gave rise to frequent objections on the part of the judge advocate.

Leonard asked Mitchell if he believed that the frame work of the Shenandoah had been corroded.

"I'm not sure," said Mitchell. "Salt water causes corrosion. The frame work might thus have been weakened."

30 Percent Efficient.

"In response to other questions, Mitchell asserted that the Shenandoah was only fifty per cent efficient" when she crashed because of extra weight, and because the substitution of helium for Hydrogen had reduced her lifting power.

Leonard persistently querried Mitchell as to his knowledge of the dirigible's being weakened, as intimated in Mitchell's now famous San Antonio statement.

"Development of aircraft in this country is a question of public concern and the public is entitled to know the facts," Mitchell replied.

"That is why I issued my statement. It was dangerous in my opinion to send the dirigible over the mountains on her last flight for the reasons given. Her cruising radius had been impaired. She did not return."

Survivors Ignore Mitchell.

Mitchell was treated with apparent haughty contempt by the Shenandoah survivors. After the flying colonel has been on the stand for two hours, he was turned over to the survivors for examination.

"We do not wish to question the witness," said Lieutenant Commander C. E. Rosendahl, senior surviving officer.

"It is apparent that he has no knowledge of his own relative to the Shenandoah, and we believe it would be futile for that reason to question him," Rosendahl added.

Mitchell was then excused, but as a parting shot told Rear Admiral Hilary P. Jones, president of the court: "I would like to tell you that I've always wanted to come here and testify but my counsel would not permit me to do it."

In Police Court.

Clarence Thomas, 18 year old negro, who had been employed on the Gilboa water works, broke the seal on a milk car on the Ulster & Delaware Railroad and entered the car and obtained free transportation to Kingston. When the car arrived here Officers Tierney and Roosa, of the West Shore police, found the seal broken and found Clarence asleep. This morning Judge Schirick gave Clarence a sentence of thirty days in the county jail. James Manley, arrested for public intoxication, was sentenced to two days to sober up.

In Surrogate's Court.

The will of Catherine Dempsey of Kingston has been filed and probated in the surrogate's court. Ann Dempsey is named as executrix. Value of estate $1,200 real; $100 personal. Beneficiaries are six daughters and one son. John T. Cahill attorney for the petitioner.

Former Premier Dead.

Paris, Dec. 21.—Former Premier Felix Jules Meline died here today. M. Meline, who was born in Vosges May 20, 1838, was premier from 1896 to 1898 and in 1899 was a candidate for the presidency. He was leader of the moderate Republicans.

Doumer's Program Is Too Lenient

To Permanently Correct France's Financial Evils Is Belief—Denies Sending Circulars to Debtor Nations.

Paris, Dec. 21.—Fears that the French financial crisis will not be relieved by the program of Finance Minister Doumer were reflected today on the Bourse when the franc fell rapidly, touching 2.78 to a dollar at 11 o'clock.

Two factors are said to have been responsible for this new weakening of the franc, first the possibility of the reaction of the finance minister's program, and second the realization that the plan of industrials to mortgage their plants for an external loan is likely to fail and even if put into effect can only forestall the days of reckoning.

There is great speculation today as to the ability of the government to muster a majority for the program of M. Doumer, despite the comfortable majority which Premier Briand received on the confidence vote on his Syrian policy.

The Communists were alone in opposing the premier's Syrian policy, but there were many who abstained from voting.

As M. Loucheur's financial program was considered to drastic so M. Doumer's program is being opposed on grounds that it is too lenient and does not permanently correct the nations financial evils.

The left cartel is already drawing up its own financial program in opposition to that which M. Doumer has proposed.

M. Doumer's use of the funds, voted to permit M. Loucher to inflate the currency, for current expenses is being rather widely opposed.

Unless the finance minister has some new tricks up his sleeve, his program seems certain to find its way through the chamber of deputies a most difficult one.

Reports that France has sent a circular note to debtor nations urging them to pay their debts to aid the French in their financial crisis, were denied today by the foreign office.

Abandon Coal Strike Parley

Operators Unable to Get Committee Together—Peace Conference Between Miners and Operators Falls Through.

Scranton, Pa., Dec. 21.—Plans to hold a conference this afternoon between representatives of the coal operators, striking anthracite miners and mayors of the cities in the anthracite district fell through when Mayor Durkan of Scranton announced that the operators could not get their committee together in time.

W. W. Inglis, spokesman of the operators' committee, notified Mayor Durkan of his failure to assemble the operators shortly before noon and plans for the meeting today were abandoned.

Whether the meeting will be held at all was problematical this afternoon. John Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers, still maintained his position that the miners would enter the conference only on the basis that the negotiations be confined to the settlement outlined by Governor Pinchot. The operators have steadfastly refused to enter a conference limited to this plan.

Mayor Durkan, however, was hopeful that the miners' chief could be persuaded to change his position.

Newburgh Youths Take Auto Here

Arrested in That City on Charge of Stealing Emil Friedel's Studebaker Roadster—Came to Kingston Saturday and Had Exciting Time.

George Atkins, 22 years old, and John Donohue, 19 years old, both of Newburgh, will be arraigned in police court here Tuesday morning on a charge of grand larceny in stealing the Studebaker roadster owned by Emil Friedel of No. 145 Hasbrouck avenue. Both youths were arrested in Newburgh Sunday and held for the Kingston police. The car was also recovered there. Donohue also will be tried on a charge of public intoxication.

Both youths drove to Kingston on Saturday in a New Nash sedan owned by Atkins, and about 8:30 o'clock Saturday evening Policeman Bowser found the Nash parked at Green street and Lucas avenue, while inside the car was Donohue intoxicated. The officer took car and man to police headquarters and Donohue was sent to the county jail to await trial on the charge of public intoxication. The car was placed in the police garage.

About 10:30 o'clock Saturday evening Mr Friedel reported to the police that his Studebaker had been stolen from Crown street where it had been parked in front of the Van-Ross Hotel.

Shortly before midnight George Atkins reported to the police that his Nash car had been stolen. At police headquarters Atkins produced papers showing he was the owner of the car in which Donohue had been found and the car was turned over to him. He was also informed of Donohue's plight and asked if he wanted to bail Donohue out of jail but replied that he did not. A little later, however, Atkins returned to police headquarters and furnished cash bail in the sum of $25 for Donohue, who was released in the charge of Atkins.

In the meanwhile the police department was kept busy hunting for the stolen Studebaker car and it was reported to them several times and both car and the men in it eluded capture. At 3 o'clock Sunday morning it was reported to the police that the Studebaker was seen going down Broadway at a terrific speed and the police gave chase as far as Port Ewen but the Studebaker had too much of a lead.

Sergeant Phinney then got in touch with the Newburgh police and told them the car was going south at a great rate of speed and asking them to look out for it. The Newburgh police later notified Kingston that they had captured the car and its occupants and would hold them for the arrival of a Kingston officer.

Still later both men were turned over to Sergeant Phinney who made a hurried trip to Newburgh. The sergeant was somewhat startled when the Newburgh police produced Donohue and Atkins as the men in the stolen Studebaker car, which was also turned over to Sergeant Phinney.

On his return to police headquarters here Sergeant Phinney made an investigation and found that Atkins after driving his Nash car to the county jail and obtaining the release of Donohue had then parked his Nash car on Broadway avenue.

Atkins when questioned told a number of conflicting stories, while Donohue had nothing to say.

Both youths were arraigned later Sunday before Judge Conklin and released under $500 bail each for their appearance in police court Tuesday morning.

The Studebaker car was turned over to Mr. Friedel.

Court Adherence Is Menace to Monroe Doctrine

Senator Walsh Assured Senate Today in Lengthy Dissertation.

Washington, Dec. 21.—American adherence to the world court involved no menace to the Monroe Doctrine, or other jealously guarded American policies, Senator Walsh, Dem., of Montana, assured the senate today in a lengthy dissertation on the duties of the tribunal in which he sought to answer many points raised by the opposition.

"Concern about the Monroe Doctrine is not what troubles those who talk about it in this connection," declared Senator Walsh. It is not so much the fate of the Monroe Doctrine they fear as an increase in the prestige of the League of Nations.

"If the United States should become involved in a controversy with another nation, a feature of which was the Monroe Doctrine, we remain at perfect liberty to submit or not submit the dispute to the court, and the other party could not bring it before the court through the agency of a request by the council or assembly, (of the league) for an advisory opinion, nor could either of those bodies on the initiative of another nation," Walsh said.

Suppose cited Walsh, England and Brazil should engage in a dispute which they agreed to submit to the court, "are we prepared to say to the South or Central American states that they cannot submit their controversies to any tribunal not of our choosing?"

European arbitrators, he declared, have served in the adjustment of many Latin American controversies.

Concerning the much discussed "advisory opinions" which the court renders the league upon request, he declared these opinions were the same in principle as obtained in some American states.

While the United States Supreme Court does not render advisory opinions at the request of the executive branch of the government, nevertheless, he said, the courts do in New York, Connecticut, and other states.

"It is an innovation warmly recommended by the American Bar Association," said Walsh "which has for a number of years been endeavoring to secure congressional legislation introducing it into the federal judicial system."

Starr, of the 27th Division, wealthy clubman and member of the New York Stock Exchange, it was revealed today when detectives started a city wide search of pawn shops for the missing gems.

Mrs. Starr lives with her husband at 15 West 55th street in a suite on the fifth floor. The jewels were stolen yesterday afternoon. Colonel Starr is a member of the firm of Morgan, Livermore & Company.

The burglars apparently gained entrance by use of a key.

GOOD ROADS

THROUGH ROADS AND FUTURE DEVELOPMENT

When the Lincoln highway was laid out across the continent 12 years ago, motor vehicle traffic was not a problem. Heavy through passenger traffic was then foreseen by but a few and interurban freight transportation was a dream.

But the founders of the Lincoln highway, with a vision of the present marvelous development of highway transportation, endeavored to set an example in the routing of the Lincoln highway by leading it around or near, instead of through large centers along the line.

This policy, far from meeting with the approval of the authorities or the business men of the communities near the projected route, raised a storm of disapproval.

Every community between New York and San Francisco near the line selected for the first transcontinental highway fought with avidity to have the route marked to follow through its main streets—through the heart of its downtown district.

In later years, as realinement on the route became possible and the original location was slightly revised here and there in the process of shortening, many communities originally incorporated on the route were by-passed, and in each instance the association's board was deluged with protestations, visited by committees and strongly censured when it held to its original policy of missing every community possible.

It is difficult to estimate to what extent the progress of improvement on the Lincoln highway has been delayed in some states through the antagonism or apathy developed in certain influential centers of population because the route did not exactly bisect the business communities of such centers and pass the doors of the business establishments.

It is interesting to note how the passage of years and the development of American highways and highway transport have changed the municipal attitude toward through-route construction and alinement. There is hardly a metropolitan center along the Lincoln highway now which is not making a strenuous effort to provide adequate by-passes for the tremendous volume of travel which it is now recognized should not be allowed to add to the growing congestion of busy business streets.

City planning commissioners everywhere are urging the opening and broadening of through arteries traversing the edges rather than the centers of metropolitan areas. American cities have had a tendency to centralize along a first main business street and later along a few such streets. Few of them are laid out with an eye toward decentralization of traffic and a great problem lies before American communities in taking steps now to take care of the still greater coming traffic.

Now is not too early to plan for the accommodation of the traffic of 1950. The development of American roads is just beginning to reach the point where the fullest use and efficiency of the motor vehicle can be realized. As our interurban roads are improved the problem of providing by-passes or adequate city avenues of traffic for the through transport which will develop in the future will become more and more pressing and its solution more and more expensive.

Steps taken now in the planning of the future development of American cities and with an eye on the provision of through transport arteries will pay big dividends to the next generation.

Mexico Building Roads

Construction work on three new highways, running from the City of Mexico to Puebla, to Laredo and to Chiapas, in Mexico, will begin this month. The highways commission has already awarded the construction contracts to a construction company of Chicago. Taxes of 300,000 pesos a month derived from gasoline and tobacco, will be used to pay for the new roads.

Good Road Hints

On bridges and steep grades where heavy continuous traffic is necessary, rubber has already proved itself not only as the most satisfactory but the most economical form of paving.

Completion of state highway systems with the continued support of the federal government was urged in a resolution adopted by the national convention of the American Federation of Labor at Atlantic City.

Oil is suggested for unpaved state roads, but putting concrete on them seems to give better satisfaction.

Lowest highway bids in Minnesota history received on about $1,000,000 of trunk route grading, graveling and paving, which was put under contract recently, caused J. T. Ellison, acting highway commissioner, to take further advantage of the low costs and stretch auto and gas tax funds with a call for bids on 92 miles of graveling for seven different sections and on two bridges.

Both American and British radio fans are calling for better quality of entertainment, and are likely to keep it up until real artists are assured of the compensation for their services which they demand

Mr Hoover complains that this country spends ten times as much for cosmetics as for scientific investigation but as long as the better half of the country is more interested in cosmetics what can be done about it

In spite of the wide complaint of too many laws Congress is threatened with an unusually large number of new measures, and of course it will be called on in the name of national patriotism to do much that is wholly sectional

According to the annual report of the Department of Justice, criminal cases have increased 500 per cent since 1912. To what extent the results of wide revolt against prohibition have been involved in the latter part of the period is not estimated

The new Congress is substantially the same as the old Of the 435 members of the new House 353 hold over from the previous Congress, and of the 96 members of the new Senate all but 12 succeed themselves in office. More than 80 per cent of the new House made part of the old and almost 90 per cent of the new Senate belonged to the old. Radical change in the personnel of our governmental departments is rare in this "most conservative country in the world."

The predictions that we shall have a dreadfully cold winter and a disastrously cool summer will no doubt be largely discounted because they have been made before, within recent years, and failed to come off. Though in cases they may create something like a hysteria of fright under coal strike conditions, on the whole the hard-winter predictions are likely to serve a useful purpose, causing the people to avoid delay and bestir themselves to secure fuel of any fairly satisfactory sort.

Dwellers in our most populous centers may at times be tempted to think that the day is coming when men will begin to crowd each other off the planet, but as yet the world is far from full. "An Australian at a recent dinner in New York reminded his listeners that his native land is big enough to fill the whole Atlantic Ocean between our seaboard and England, with a thousand miles more to lap over on this side or the other, adding. "And in that whole continent we have only five million people—fewer than you have in this one city."

CROWDING DEER AND ELK

The increase of wild animal life in this country, in spite of the growth of population, the limiting of forest areas, and the narrowing of the "open spaces," is a remarkable phenomenon. We read that deer and elk "congestion" now presents serious problems in parts of the West In the Jackson Hole region in Wyoming the elk herds are so large that when snow drives them from the mountains the forage in the lowlands is not sufficient and many die 25,000 to 40,000 animals die of starvation, great efforts having therefore been made to put out hay for their consumption. Another overcrowded area is the Kaibab national forest in Arizona, where the protected deer have increased beyond the forage possibilities, and an attempt has been made to drive a considerable part of the herd of 30,000 into another part of Arizona. But the most expert cowboys found that driving large numbers of deer was a different thing from driving cattle and after three days of effort confessed their failure.

Then the Kaibab forest was opened for a limited shooting season without noticeable results This returns the Agricultural Department announced that the forest was open for shooting, but the Governor of Arizona refused to recognize Federal authority to do this and litigation requiring time has followed. Meanwhile, it is feared, many deer will starve. A third crowded area is in Utah, where the elk have increased until they have become a nuisance, readily leaping over or demolishing any wire fence to get at forbidden forage. A year's open season for hunting, temporarily permitting the freedom of pioneer times, would serve, but authorities accustomed to hear conservation preached naturally hesitate to employ so radical and possibly too effective a remedy

That Body of Yours

NO MYSTERY NOW.

It doesn't seem very long ago since medicine was considered a "mysterious" profession

The doctor examined the patient carefully, left directions as to medicine and nursing, but said nothing whatever to the patient or family as to the diagnosis of the ailment, the possible length of the illness, and its probable outcome

And the family felt that to ask questions was really not putting complete trust in the physician

Dr Charles H Mayo, America's foremost surgeon, told a congress of surgeons recently, that the physician or surgeon who hides the facts from his patient is out of date

The physician of today hides nothing He frankly gives the diagnosis as he finds it and takes the family and usually the patient also into his confidence so that one and all know exactly what is expected of them

If a patient with a heart condition understands that getting out of bed may mean his very life, whereas resting quietly in bed diminishes the work of his "sick" heart, he will follow directions, because he understands the "why" of remaining in bed

On the other hand when an active rheumatic of infective condition has left a joint the doctor explains that if the patient does not actively move the joint that it may stiffen up completely, because waste material will become a part of the joint and prevent movement And in ailments such as typhoid he explains to the family that as many as twenty cases have been traced to one servant who left a trail of typhoid cases in every house where she worked. This ensures care on the part of the family in sterilizing the dishes and so forth handled by the patient.

Or as Dr. Mayo puts it, a sort of partnership is formed between the patient and doctor with more satisfactory results

150 YEARS AGO

The Origin of the U. S. A.

By Jonathan A. Rawson, Jr.

WAS THIS THE LAST STRAW?

One hundred and fifty years ago today England put into effect what has since been known as the Prohibitory Act. To large numbers of American colonials, who had even since Lexington and Bunker Hill clung to the hope that friendly relations with Great Britain might still be restored on acceptable terms, this piece of legislation was almost "the last straw." The purpose of the act was to completely shut off the American colonies from all trade relations with the rest of the world. Notice was served upon all nations that any of their ships which were discovered trading with the revolted American colonies would be seized, cargoes and all, and be considered the lawful prizes of the British Navy.

The object was, of course, to bring the rebellious Americans to a state of complete submission to British authority, for the Prohibitory Act made it clear that any American community, whether an entire colony or only a town, could escape this embargo by declaring its loyalty and submission to the British king. This bait did not prove attractive in any noticeable way. Not by this device were "the embattled farmers," "the ragged continentals" and the military and civil leaders of the revolution to be divided aganist themselves or persuaded to plead for peace

On the contrary the stern determination of those who were already arguing for complete separation from England became sterner still, and thousands of conservatives who had hitherto declared themselves to be British subjects still, despite the quarrel with the mother country, now began to ask themselves how there could longer be loyalty to a nation which had not only withdrawn its protection from them and their homes, but which had even attacked and burned their homes, and which was now ready to destroy their trade and deprive them of their means of livelihood.

However, news traveled slowly in those days and the full effect of the Prohibitory Act in adding fuel to the revolutionary flame was not to appear for several weeks. Indeed, while this act was passing the British House of Commons, 150 years ago today, by a vote of 112 to 16, the patriots of New Hampshire were assembling in a convention which was to establish a new government and write what had been called "the first American constitution", but this new government, it was most carefully stated, was to be in effect only "during the present contest" Not a word must there be in that new constitution about a complete, final separation from Great Britain.

Tree Pullers Spread Disease

By Carrying Young Trees Around the State—Serious Forest Menace—Should Be Checked Says Conservation Commissioner Macdonald.

Albany, Dec. 21.—Conservation Commissioner Alexander Macdonald in his forthcoming annual report to the Legislature calls attention to a serious menace to forest conservation in the promiscuous pulling and transportation of young forest trees and recommends that all persons transporting trees be required to secure a certificate showing that such trees are free from disease.

The practice of tourists to pull up young trees and carry them away on the running boards of automobiles is becoming alarming prevalent and threatens to spread tree diseases throughout the state unless stopped.

Discussing this practice, Commissioner Macdonald says:

"The person who pulls up trees and straps them on the running board of or puts them in his car and carries them for miles is ignorant that he is killing them. He apparently only thinks how nice they will look on his lawn and that he isn't spending any money for them.

"This man apparently does not know that when the roots of small evergreen trees dry, the trees die. He doesn't know that he is removing trees from their natural environment where nature planted them and intended them to grow. He does not stop to think that every tree removed leaves the ground barren, which would have in time become shaded. He doesn't think that he is one of thousands of persons who do the same thing.

"There is not a tourist or camper who removes trees from our forests but is financially able to buy better trees than he removes and trees that are sure to grow. The tree pullers would not tolerate the removal of trees from their own property, yet they ignore the rights of others and take that which is not theirs.

"The promiscuous removal of trees in New York and the bringing of trees from other states into this state with no certificate of inspection is one of the surest means of carrying dangerous forest tree pests into parts of New York where they do not at present exist. New York spends annually more than $200,000 in fighting two very dangerous forest tree pests, viz: The gipsy moth and a fungous disease of the white pine—white pine blister rust. This latter disease will make, if not controlled, the growing of white pine an impossibility, and the gipsy moth will surely destroy shade and forest trees wherever he gets a foothold.

"Plant pest control work of any sort is expensive and will never be successful so long as people are pulling of tens of thousands of trees every year and recklessly transporting them over the state. The burden of pest control is bound to become heavier each year if this practice continues. Here is one of the most dangerous menaces to forest conservation and one in which there should be no delay in stopping.

"The nurserymen of New York are required by law to have certificates of inspection from the state, stating that their nurseries are free from dangerous pests before they are permitted to ship plants of any sort from their nurseries. There is a federal and a state quarantine against bringing pine trees into New York from New England, the violation of which subjects the offender to a penalty of $100. It is absolutely inconsistent with our present nursery laws and quarantines to tolerate the haphazard transportation of trees from one part of our state to another.

"The security of forest conservation, the rights of farmers and the state and those who love and respect our great natural playgrounds, the forests, demand that New York have a law requiring every person who transports a tree or trees for planting or trees and parts of trees for decorative, ornamental, sentimental or other purposes be required to secure a certificate showing where and from whom such tree or trees or parts of trees were obtained and that they are free from disease."

EARTH CONNECTION IMPORTANT

Poor Reception and Broad Tuning Often Caused by Poor Ground.

F. M. RUSSELL.

The importance of an efficient ground connection can hardly be overestimated. If there is a resistance to the passage of the high frequency oscillations in any part of the aerial or ground circuit, you find your receiver lacks pep, oscillates badly and tunes broadly. Pep or volume, stability and selectivity are three things every fan likes to have in his set but a large number do not realize what a strong influence a good ground connection has in obtaining results.

It is worth while doing some experimenting with ground connections and you will probably find out some very interesting facts. One of the simplest and best methods to use in testing the efficiency of various ground connections is to tune in a station as far distant as possible then reduce the volume until you can just hear the signal faintly. Make a note of the dial settings on the rheostats controlling the volume. Now disconnect the ground and try one of the others you have arranged and compare the volume. If you cannot hear any signal, wait a minute to make sure the station has not been fading. If, after a short period you still do not hear a signal, then you know that this ground is not as efficient as the first one.

In addition to comparing the volume obtained with each possible ground, make a test for selectivity. It is surprising what a difference a good ground can make to the selectivity.

If you use a regenerative receiver, body capacity is likely to be troublesome if a good ground is not used. A test of a ground on this type of receiver is to tune in a station then touch the ground wire with the end of your finger. If this changes the tuning to any extent the ground needs looking into.

Try out each of the ground connections it is possible to arrange until you find one that gives better results than the others. I will describe in tomorrow's article how to make several very efficient ground connections.

Navy's Health Never Better

Washington, D. C., Dec. 21.—"There are fewer admissions to the sick list and less disability from sickness than in any year since the World War," Rear Admiral E. R. Stitt, surgeon general of the Navy, declared today in his annual report.

"The death rate from disease was very low, 1.78 per 1,000 of personnel. A lower rate has been experienced only once in the history of the Navy. That was in 1922, when the rate was 1.65."

The year, however, witnessed 285 deaths from violence and other external causes.

"Disasters occurring in 1924 were responsible for the loss of six officers and seventy-two enlisted men," Stitt said.

"With the development of aviation new hazards have been introduced. In 1924 there were seventy-eight admissions to the sick list, 1,578 sick days and thirty-two deaths resulting from injuries incurred in flying. In 1922 there were nineteen deaths and in 1922, twenty. These figures do not necessarily mean that flying is less safe than it was a year or two ago. Exposure to hazard has increased."

NEW YEAR SONGS

"Well, well, well," said the Old Year, "so here you are, looking just as young as can be.

"Well do I remember, Young Year, how I felt when I was just your age.

"I felt so pleased with myself and as thought I were almost going to make the whole world over.

"I felt that every one was going to keep to their good resolutions and that I would keep to mine, too. But, in spite of all, it's a pretty good old world, and the fact that we want to make it better and jog ourselves up a bit from time to time is a very good sign.

"But tell me, little New Year, have you any baby songs to sing? Maybe you have some New Year lullabies. I'd so much like to hear them.

"And little new things should have lullabies. Maybe you have some. Have you, little New Year?"

"I believe I do remember some that old Grandmother Old, Old, Old, Old, Old Year used to sing me while old Grandfather Old, Old, Old, Old, Old Year used to smoke his pipe down in the Snowy Castle where all the Old Years spend their winters," said little New Year.

"The warm fire glowing with memories keeps the castle so warm and the children—and the little years yet to be—play around and have such a jolly time.

"You'll be there in no time at all, Old Year, and you will add your wonderful memories which glow with warmth of lovely times that are passed to all of the others so that it will be ever comfortable and cozy.

"But now I shall sing you one of those lullabies:

"Go to sleep, my little New Year,
Go to sleep, you little young dear.
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep.

"Go to sleep, my little New Year,
Go to sleep, for you're to give cheer.
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep.

"Go to sleep, and get your rest,
A new Year must always be at its best.
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep.

"Go to sleep so you won't look old,
A new Year must appear young and bold.
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep.

"Go to sleep, my little New Year,
Always be brave, and never show fear.
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep.

"Go to sleep, for soon you must go,
And oh, such a lot you will have to know.
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep,
Go to sleep.

"That was the lullaby she sang to me and wonderful stories she told me and lessons she taught me of how to try to make the world a kinder place with more and more affection and understanding in it."

"Good," said the Old Year. "Good. But now I must go. I'll sing as I leave:

"The Old Year must go,
He cannot be slow,
For the New Year is here,
With his Happy New Cheer.
Good-by! Happy New Year!"

Merle Was Homesick

Merle and her mother had been making a rather protracted visit, and the youngster was showing signs of homesickness. One day her mother found her crying quietly to herself.

When the mother inquired what was the matter, the child replied she wanted to go home.

"Why do you want to go home, Merle; you're having a nice time, aren't you?"

"Yes, murver," she replied, then hesitated a moment and sobbed forth, "I jes' wanta go home and see our carpet."

SWEETS AND CAKES

This is the season of the year when we all begin to think of homemade candies and cookies.

Cherry and Marshmallow Fudge.—Put into a saucepan one cupful of sugar, one-half cupful of cream, stir until well melted. Boil the mixture until it makes a soft ball in cold water, add one tablespoonful of butter and remove from the fire. Beat for fifteen minutes; pour into a buttered tin in which are one-fourth pound of marshmallows cut into dice and one-fourth pound of minced preserved cherries. Cut into squares when cool.

Velvet Molasses Candy.—Put one cupful of molasses, three cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of boiling water and three tablespoonfuls of vinegar into a saucepan over the heat; as soon as the boiling point is reached add one-half teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Boil until when tried in cold water the mixture becomes brittle. Stir constantly during the last part of the cooking. When nearly done, add one-half cupful of butter and one-fourth teaspoonful of soda. Pour into a buttered pan and pull when cold enough to handle. Flavor while pulling, with peppermint, lemon, vanilla or wintergreen.

Butterscotch.—Take one cupful of sugar, one-fourth cupful of molasses, one tablespoonful of vinegar, two tablespoonfuls of boiling water and one-half cupful of butter. Cook until brittle when tried in cold water, flavor with vanilla, turn into well-buttered pan; when cool mark off into squares.

Bread Crumb Griddle Cakes.—Take two cupfuls of bread crumbs and cover with sour milk, let stand over night, in the morning add an egg, salt and a teaspoonful of soda. Beat well adding flour enough to make a griddle cake batter. Bake on a hot griddle and serve with fried sausage.

Dry out bread crumbs in the oven, roll with a rolling pin until evenly crumbed, store in a glass jar for various au gratin dishes, or use in steamed bread, adding two cupfuls of the crumbs and less of flour.

Polished Tables

The way to remove hot water marks on polished table tops or papier mache trays is to treat them with a paste made of olive oil and salt. The paste should be left on for half an hour and then rubbed away with a cloth. If the first application does not succeed, repeat the process which rarely fails to give good results.

Doctoring a Mountain

Some alarm has been caused in Rome by the statement of scientists that the Matterhorn, one of Italy's famous mountains, is in a shaky condition, and may topple over into the Italian valley. Years ago similar fears for the Rocher de la Clusette in Jura caused engineers to rush to the mountain and shore it up with concrete.

TO VISIT GRAVES OF COMRADE DEAD

Plans for holding the 1927 national convention of the American Legion in Paris are being worked out rapidly, according to John J. Wicker, Jr., of Richmond, Va., chairman of the French convention travel committee of the Legion. The committee's arrangements, as already made, were officially approved by the national convention at Omaha, and the committee was authorized to continue with necessary details.

The convention, according to the committee, is to be "the occasion of a great national pilgrimage to our foreign cemeteries, the last resting place of approximately 50,000 of our own comrades, and to the battlefields where they fought and died, and where hundreds of thousands of our comrades suffered their wounds and disabilities. We believe that such a pilgrimage, coming in 1927, the tenth anniversary year of America's entrance into the World war and the creation of the A. E. F., in a real sense would be a 'second A. E. F,' the first A. E. F. having crossed the seas in time of war to aid in the struggle against the common enemy, and the second A. E. F. coming in time of peace, paying solemn homage to our own comrade dead, and promoting international peace and good will."

The latter part of September has been recommended by the committee as the best time for holding the convention. The French government has given assurances that it will place the Trocadero, the largest auditorium in Paris, with a seating capacity of 12,000, at the disposal of the convention.

Participation in the trip will be limited to those who have been bona fide paid-up members of the Legion for both 1926 and 1927, the auxiliary and minor lineal descendants of such members. Official ships will be designated to sail from Houston, Hampton Roads, New York, Boston and Montreal. One-fare railroad rates between the home and the port of embarkation have been assured. Reductions will also probably be given by French railroads. All Paris hotel accommodations of every class are to be held for the disposal of the Legion during the period of the convention.

The minimum round-trip time is estimated at 23 days from the Atlantic seaboard. This will give seven days in France to cover the convention and the pilgrimage. Longer periods and various side trips may be taken.

Savings clubs are being organized over the country so that persons desiring to make the trip may do so without financial difficulty.

UNIVERSAL SERVICE

UNIVERSAL service, the adoption of which by congress is the outstanding point on the American Legion legislative program for 1926, was indorsed by President Calvin Coolidge in his address before the Legion convention at Omaha. The President said in part:

"Undoubtedly one of the most important provisions in the national defense is a proper and sound selective service act. Such a law ought to give authority for a very broad mobilization of all resources of the country, both persons and materials. I can see some difficulties in the application of the principle, for it is the payment of a higher price that stimulates production; whenever it can be done without economic dislocation such limits ought to be established in time of war as would prevent so far as possible all kinds of profiteering.

"There is little defense which can be made of a system which puts some men in the ranks on very small pay and leaves others undisturbed to reap very large profits. . . . In the advent of war, power should be lodged somewhere for the stabilization of prices as far as that might be possible in justice to the country and its defenders."

In Memory of Wilson

A $200,000 memorial bridge over Pearl river, Mobile, Ala., was named the "Woodrow Wilson Bridge" in memory of the war-time President at the suggestion of Henry Graves Post of the American Legion at Mobile. The Legion ordered a bronze tablet placed on the bridge and a portion of the inscription will be a sentence from the address of President Wilson to congress asking for a declaration of war against Germany.

Meets in Philadelphia

Philadelphia has been chosen as the place for holding the 1926 national convention of the American Legion. The Legion gathering, to be held some time in October, will be a feature of the city's observance of the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence.

Nutty Natural History

By HUGH HUTTON.

THE CREOLE HOODOO.

The male hoodoo is a shy, self-effacing bird that is thoroughly henpecked by the hen hoodoo. Two dozen pecks, or six bushels, is his average daily punishment. Most of the time he is half asleep, due to lying awake nights watching his wife go through his pockets. As a hoodoo is usually found sleepily leaning against a pork chop tree, he is easily caught by chopping down the tree. Roasted and stuffed with watermelons, the hoodoo is said to be quite delicious.

The hoodoo, for all his elusiveness, is easily constructed, and two single peanuts are all that are needed for the head and body. The legs are toothpicks, with split peanut feet and the topknot is a popped popcorn. The tail, which is practically useless as he seldom desires to wag it, is a clove.

Buy Xmas Seals, Help Fight T. B.

Kingston N. Y. Dec. 21 1925.
Christmas Greetings

Your children still in their teens do not remember a Christmas without the Christmas Seal which has been a part of holiday festivity for eighteen years. So, too the continuous fight against tuberculosis waged by this tiny seal has become a part of our community life.

To your children in their 'teens—and your neighbor's children next door—the fight of the seal means more than to grown-ups. Tuberculosis is usually incurred in childhood and its outbreak in later life depends upon the health habits formed in early youth. That is why your committee for Ulster county plans children's work.

You can help to prevent the great number of deaths from tuberculosis and relieve much of the suffering from this wasteful disease in two ways. By asking our advice concerning any case of tuberculosis you know of, and by buying and using the Health Christmas Seals.

The carrying out of these plans depends upon the Seals sold here in Ulster county. Used on packages and letters the twin candles of this year's seal carry a double wish for your children which the purchase of these seals can help fulfill. It is, "Merry Christmas and Good Health" for Ulster county children.

Tuberculosis can be wiped out—Buy Health Christmas Seals.

Eleanor Lamb Says

That Velvet and Lame Are Friendly Rivals for Night Life Supremacy.

Although the smart world may be learning to Charleston, their clothes are quite decorous, even though their deportment may be open to criticism. What more dignified than velvet, what more elegant than beautiful lames or metal cloth?

Much has been said and written concerning the formality of evening fashions, and of afternoon style, too, as far as that is concerned. These tales have not been misleading, for fashions are elegant, indeed could not fail to be with such priceless materials in service. Chanel's sequins gown, as red as Chinese lacquer, is a daring note encountered here and there, yet one is accustomed to red in all materials, shades, and, one might add, places for red is far from being confined to evennig. Any fashionable promenade will disprove such a notion. Red is, however, worn, perhaps next to green, more than any other color. There is, of course, nothing really new about the ruby or geranium velvet evening gown, but they are turned out in new molds and continue to maintain interest, possibly because they are almost invariably flattering. The newer notes in velvet run to absinthe and chartreuse green, in fact through the entire gamut of green, skipping obvious shades and inclining toward yellowish tints. Dresses in satins along these tones are also greatly admired and frequently helped out by bands of matching or gold sequins. The combination of green and gold seems to be a perfectly approved one, and in some of the darker greens bordering on olive or sage, black is often added. To be without a velvet gown, or a velveteen one this season, is to be quite out of the running. The velvet gown may be a simple two-piece or jumper type, and it may be not velvet, but rayon velveteen or velveteen, but it must be numbered among the things hanging in one's wardrobe, though, as a matter of fact, it gets little chance for an inactive life. Then there is the velvet coat—whatever did we do before they became the fashion!

Rivera Fashions Featured in French Comedy Show Lanvin Inspirations.

Paris.—The title of the new comedy at the Theatre de l'Avenue may be a bit risque, but "La Facon de se Donner," the title and the play itself, are of the variety which flourish only in the French theatre. It is an amusing comedy, thoroughly enjoyable, and owes its success in a measure to the witty and skillful acting of the cast, which includes the well known Jane Renouardt and Abel Tarride.

Rivera Costumes Featured.

A large part of the action takes place at Cannes, and consequently effective Riviera costumes are displayed. Jeanne Lanvin is responsible for most of the frocks, as she dresses the leading artist, Jane Renouardt. A red frock of light woolen, featuring the bolero treatment, is particularly attractive. The hem of a white crepe de chine underblouse appears at the bottom and at the neckline of the bolero, ending in the lattern in a collar, pointed in treatment, and finely pleated. The pleated touch of white is repeated on the sleeves. The skirt, flat at the back, is widely circular at the front.

Premet dresses the pretty Irene Wells in a Nile green straightline jumper frock, with a pleated skirt, and a jumper buttoning at the front, with a little turnover collar and two pockets. The interest of this frock lies especially in its short sleeves.

Taffeta Frock by Lanvin.

The other frocks by Jeanne Lanvin are characteristic, for although they are not real robes de style, they sponsor the very full gathered skirt, with the normal waistline. One, of deep blue Italian taffeta, with a fitted bodice and a skirt ending in wide scallops, outlined by several rows of stitching, has a double collar, the under one in pink, ending at the front in a small bow with two long loose ends lined in pink. The actress wears with this dress a long necklace of mother-of-pearl, ending in a square piece of carved glass with another single pearl to finish it. The tiny hat, of the same blue taffeta as the frock, is trimmed with pink ostrich and has a long feather banging over the shoulder.

Very striking is another dress of pink satin, worked in pointed bands and trimmed with square appliques of black velvet. A large capeline hat is worn with this frock.

A Japanese dashabiki, also from Lanvin, is of pink satin, trimmed with motifs of silver embroidery, and featuring a white obi, with its huge bow at the back of silver lame.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Persistent coughs and colds lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with two-fold action: it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for persistent coughs and colds and other forms of throat troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflected membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of persistent coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, bronchitis and other forms of respiratory diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Company, Atlanta, Ga. (adv.)

Hunger Walking With Misery in Hard Coal Area

Red Cross Worker Pictures Calamity Soon if Pennsylvania Strike Goes On—Miners Despite Want Are Standing Firm.

Mt. Carmel, Dec. 21.—Hunger, with attendant misery is beginning to manifest itself in the anthracite coal fields of Pennsylvania, an area that has enjoyed a period of unprecedented prosperity since the outbreak of the World War.

First evidence of penury was revealed in an address by Clem Schneider, chairman of the Mount Carmel Red Cross, who appealed to churches and charitable organizations "to go out into your wards and see for yourself the great number of households whose larders are barren and whose juvenile inmates have barely enough habiliment to protect their little bodies from the icy blasts of winter."

Plans Red Cross Appeal.

Mr. Schneider pleaded for action and asserted that if the strike continues much longer he will appeal to the national officers of the American Red Cross to send trained welfare workers into the region to stay the hand of want. "It may become a calamity soon," said Mr. Schneider, "and it it does I shall ask the grand body of the Red Cross to take a hand."

Mr. Schneider made it plain that there are a number of families in Mount Carmel who have nothing at all to eat. One case reported from Kulpmont revealed nothing but coffee in a home that shelters husband, wife and eight small children.

The family received relief to the extent of $8 from the treasury of a local union and $30 was donated by a special writer for a national magazine whose attention was called to this poverty-stricken family. The husband, in normal times, received $4.62 per day, but he had been out of work since September.

"Bootlegging" Ended.

Many families have been able to purchase the necessaries of life with money received from the sale of coal taken from the mine breaches along the hillsides. The practice of illegal mining or "bootlegging" as it is called, became so general that coal companies sent in an arm of special officers with the result that mine breach activities have been halted.

Idle miners were digging coal from the various outcroppings in the mountains, selling what they did not need themselves to the people of non-coal producing communities that fringe this region. Healthy markets for bootleg coal have been found in Sunbury, Bloomsburg, Danville and Berwick, the miners taking it there in motor trucks and receiving as high as $18 per ton for the fuel.

Distribution of the Christmas checks by the banks of the region will serve to help for a time, but it is felt that with the passing of the Yuletide season hunger and want will become general.

Business has suffered and many of the merchants have returned much of the Christmas stocks bought before the strike. In Mount Carmel the Businessmen's Association inaugurated "Dress-up Days" with the hope of stimulating buying, but the effort was a failure. The merchants are convinced nothing but a resumption of work in the coal mines will help.

Street car traffic has been curtailed and hundreds of automobiles put away. Many motorists have no money with which to operate their cars and the accessories dealers and garage owners declare business at a low ebb.

Strikers Stay Firm.

But the spirit of the mineworkers is imperishable. One hears on every hand that to accede to the demands of the operators would mean the complete destruction of the United Mine Workers of America, the only weapon the coal diggers have and the means through which salaries have been brought to their present level. Not even those whose sympathy leans toward the operators would care to see disorganization strike the camp of the union.

Veteran miners point to the pre-union days and to the period just before the great coal strike of 1902 when the miners' organization was nothing more than a foundling.

Aunt Prue and Uncle Si

By JANE OSBORN

(Copyright.)

"OF COURSE I haven't the most remote idea what a godmother is supposed to do," said Prudence Deming, "but if it isn't any worse than being maid of honor, I think I can do it."

"Only, in this case, I think you have to hold the baby—and he's pretty sure to scream. They always do. But we won't be happy with anyone else. Tom has asked his Uncle Si to be the godfather, and he's coming out for the event. You are both to come the night before, to dinner, and stay for the night. They we'll have the christening at the church in the morning, when there aren't a lot of people looking on. You've never met Uncle Si, have you? He was in China when we were married."

Meantime Tom Loomis, father of the most important baby in the world, had made his way past telephone operators and private secretaries to the inner sanctum of Silas Granger, a young and genial-looking man of thirty-two or so, sitting at a very important-looking desk in a large office.

"We want you out for dinner Friday night," said Tom. "The baby's going to be christened Saturday and you're to be the best man—no, the godfather, I mean. You must manage it somehow—no one else will do; and, Si, Peggy is asking her Aunt Prue to come out and be godmother. You've heard of her."

"Hum-hrm," said Si, and had visions of a much-wrinkled little old woman like Peggy's mother.

Two days later when Silas Granger was sitting deep in thoughts of business the 'phone rang in his ear.

"This is Prue Deming. You've heard Peggy and Tom speak of me, perhaps."

"Yes, indeed," said Silas with his most respectful tone—the tone he used when he gave his seat to a very old lady. "I believe I shall have the pleasure of meeting you at the Loomises' very shortly."

"That's just what I wanted to talk about," came the voice at the other end of the telephone. "Frankly, I wanted to know what I ought to do. You know Tom hasn't anything but what he makes, and Peggy hasn't a penny of her own and never will have. So I was thinking that instead of spending a lot of money on a perfectly useless candle cup I'd just give some money. I've decided on five hundred dollars, and if you want to put as much to it that will be a thousand. We might get some sort of bonds—if you say so."

Prue said she supposed she wasn't so busy as he, so she volunteered to bring her check to his office, so that he might buy the bonds, and that afternoon she was announced by his private secretary.

For a moment, while he waited for her, Silas thought that she was a rather troublesome old lady, to come to his office at such a busy time, but when an office boy showed in the pretty Prue Deming he forgot even that he was in the least busy. She was really beautiful—but, more than that, she was very young.

"But I thought it was Aunt Prue," he said.

"And I thought it was Uncle Si," she said, and at the same time each said, "I am." Then Prue explained that she was the youngest child of Peggy's grandfather, by a second wife—and wasn't really as old as Peggy; and Uncle Si explained that he was the youngest son of Tom Loomis' grandfather, also by a second marriage. They called him Uncle Si as a sort of joke. In fact to all their mutual friends he was known as "uncle." He had always heard them speak of Aunt Prue but never dreamed that she bore her title much the same as he did his.

"You must have thought I was very impertinent," said Prudence, "coming down to your office. But I thought, of course, you were a nice old man. I'll just leave my check, and run away."

Silas had sprung to his feet when Prudence rose from her chair in his office and hurried round the room to bar the way.

"I don't want you to run away so soon," he said looking down upon her short, straight little nose, and the long silken lashes that shaded eyes that seemed the color of violets. "Let's go out to a matinee—and maybe dance afterward."

The day before the dinner at the Loomises', Peggy telephoned to Prue. "I forgot to tell you that if you wanted to bring a swain out with you to dinner you could. You're always engaged to someone or other and if there's anyone you bring him along."

"That's sweet," said Prudence, "because I really am engaged. Really and truly this time, and I am going to come out in his car and I'd love to have him for dinner."

So it was that Peggy had to call up Sally Crane, a pretty young neighbor, and ask her to come to dinner. "Aunt Prue is bringing a suitor," she said, "and I need a chaperon for Uncle Si." Then when Prudence came with Uncle Si and threw her arms around Peggy's neck and told her that she was going to marry Silas, Peggy felt that her plans had been upset. So she hurried to the telephone and called up Randolph Kirk, a bachelor of the neighborhood, to come for Sally Crane. And the funny thing about it was that it was at that dinner that Randolph Kirk fell in love with Sally. Perhaps he caught the fine fever from Silas.

FIX VALUATION OF GOOD FRUIT TREES

One of the most unsatisfactory things connected with orchard work is trying to agree upon the actual value of a tree. The potential value of such a tree may be considerable. For instance, there are some trees which average a crop that would pay a percentage on $75 or $100, yet of course, no one could give a valuation of that size. Such valuation would depend upon the variety, condition and care of the tree, the kind of soil it is growing in, the nearness to market, and also to a considerable extent on the business ability of the owner, for it is evident that one man can sell a crop of fruit to far better advantage than another man can. There have been a number of cases in court where the question of tree valuation was considered. In a number of cases, fire broke into the orchard from a railroad or from fire on the farm of a neighbor. This fire swept through the orchard and destroyed a number of trees. In other cases, a road or some big improvement made it necessary to tear up part of the orchard and thus destroy a number of trees. The question of damages came up in such cases, and it is usually found very difficult to agree. In one case, where a number of peach trees proved to be misfits, that is, not true to name, the suit was brought for damages, as it was claimed that the trees were worthless. In that case the ruling of the court was that the value of the land on which the fruit stood was to be considered, and the damages should equal the value of the land before it was planted and its value if the trees had proved true to name and carried good crops. This was not a satisfactory valuation.

In most cases, it has been held that an apple tree, firmly planted in the ground for one year is worth $1, and that it increases in value a dollar for each year of its life up to twenty-five years, that being considered about the limit of value. This valuation would be based on the fact that the tree has been reasonably cared for and had made fair growth, or at least, is of average appearance. That is the rule generally given in such damage cases, but in an orchard where the trees have been properly handled, it is not by any means an adequate valuation for a good tree.

Aim in Winter Pruning Should Be for Balance

Trees which have grown very bushy should receive a rather heavy thinning out of medium-sized wood throughout the other portions. Avoid removing large branches unnecessarily. Trees which are making rapid top growth and little bottom growth should be thinned moderately around the bottom. Unless the top is too thick it should not receive much pruning except to remove a few larger branches to admit sunlight.

The aim in pruning should be to maintain proper balance between fruit and wood growth. Cut out water sprouts and thin out small branches to stimulate wood growth. Pruning young trees of bearing age to bring them into fruit production will accomplish little. Sowing the orchard to clover sod will help check wood growth and induce fruiting.

Horticulturists have recently discovered that the removal of a limb to stimulate fruit production is felt only in the immediate vicinity from which the branch is taken. Therefore removing many small branches will be more effective than cutting out a few larger ones. Branches should be cut as close to the remaining branch as possible and parallel to it. All cuts over one and one-half inches in diameter should be coated with paint.—H. E. Nichols, Iowa State College.

Propagate Currants by Means of Wood Cuttings

The common method of propagating currants is by means of hardwood cuttings, as used with grapes, although they may be tip-layered like black raspberries, or green layering may be resorted to. Cuttings are taken in the fall and stored indoors in the ground, butts up, or indoors in a cool cellar. Currants will strike roots under almost any condition. Spirea is increased by both green and hardwood cuttings, the latter being handled like currant or grape cuttings. The greenwood cuttings are made in summer and grown in frames. Throw a little dirt over the tips of the black raspberry canes so as to hold them in place. They will root and form new plants, which are cut from the mother plant in the spring, and grown in the nursery row for a year, until large enough to sell.

Cut Out Rotting Wood

If there is any exposed rotting wood in the trunk of your apple trees it is well to cut this away, and keeping the wounds painted with white lead paint may help to prevent the spread of the rot. The injured parts are likely to gradually heal over if part of the tree is in a vigorous condition. An application of five or six pounds per tree of nitrate of soda early in the spring should help to invigorate the trees and cause more rapid healing and increase the size of the fruit.

WOODSTOCK.

Woodstock, Dec. 21.—A very pleasant event took place on the evening of December 16, at the Lutheran parsonage at Woodstock when the congregation gathered for a social time with the pastor and his wife, Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Oberholtzer, who will soon leave for their winter home in Schenectady. The pastor, however, will continue to fill the pulpit, coming down each week end. To add to the pleasure of the evening, it was learned that this date was the thirty-ninth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Peper who were showered with hearty wishes for many, many more years of happy married life.

A bountiful repast was served after which a social hour was spent, before the guests departed, the Rev. and Mrs. Oberholtzer were each presented with well filled envelopes as a token of the high esteem in which they are held by their people.

The singing of "God Be With Us 'Till We Meet Again," and the benediction by the pastor, closed an evening long to be remembered.

R. V. Taylor Will Succeed McChord

Resignation of Judge Charles C. McChord as Member of Interstate Commerce Commission a Big Surprise—Other Nominations.

Washington, Dec. 21.—Judge Charles C. McChord, for sixteen years a member of the interstate commerce commission, has resigned, and President Coolidge has appointed Richard V Taylor of Alabama to succeed him, it was announced at the White House today.

Taylor's nomination was sent to the senate by President Coolidge along with that of Thomas F. Woodlock of New York, who is now sitting as a member of the commission, although his nomination failed of confirmation in the senate last spring

McChord's resignation came as a surprise, as there had been previously no intimation of it.

Other nominations sent to the senate included

To be United States Marshal for Connecticut—Jacob D. Walker.

To be major general, officers reserve corps—William Gray Price, Jr., of Pennsylvania.

To be brigadier general, officers reserve corps—Charles Gates Dawes of Illinois, now vice president.

Judge McChord resigned Saturday, but news of it was withheld until the transmission of his successor's name to the senate today.

The resignation caused surprise in official circles. McChord is the oldest member of the commission in point of service, having been appointed by Taft in 1909.

President Coolidge recently expressed a desire to give southern states more representation on the commission, even to the extent of creating an additional member. McChord's resignation paved the way to accomplishment of this desire without the membership being increased.

Fight Led to Jail And the Hospital

Richard McLean of No. 88 West O'Reilly street was lodged in the county jail, and Joseph Ferrotta of No 86 Hoffman street was conveyed to the Kingston City Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull as the result of a fight between the two men Sunday afternoon on O'Reilly street.

McLean was arraigned before Judge Schirick in police court this morning charged with assault in the third degree, and the hearing was adjourned pending the outcome of Ferrotta's injuries.

At the hospital it was stated that Ferrotta had recovered consciousness and that an X-ray would be taken to determine the extent of the injury to the skull.

McLean is out under $500 bail bond.

It is said by the police that the fight between the two men was the outcome of an old quarrel of last summer. Sunday afternoon a hurry call was received asking that the officers be sent to 88 West O'Reilly street. When the police arrived they found Ferrotta unconscious. He had been struck on the jaw and knocked down and struck his head on the hard pavement. McLean had a lacerated ear where it is said he was bitten by Ferrotta.

Swibold Held For Grand Jury

This morning in police court James H. Swibold, the piano technician of this city, waived examination and was held to await the action of the grand jury on a charge of selling mortgaged property. He was arrested last week on a warrant sworn out by John H. Gregory, president of Gregory & Company, who charged that he had bought a bill of goods from the company for $1,140.40, paying a deposit of $20 down and agreeing to pay $150 a month until the bill was cleaned up. It is alleged that before the bill was paid Swibold without permission of Gregory & Company sold some of the furniture to the value of $214.50. Bail was continued at $1,000.

Grand Jury Finds 25 Indictments

The grand jury at the December term of supreme court reported at 2 o'clock this afternoon and handed up twenty-five indictments and one dismissal.

Twenty-three of the indictments were sealed and two were open. Alvin Foster was indicted on the charge of driving an automobile while intoxicated and Edward Conlon for assault in the second degree.

There was no bill of indictment against Gilbert S. Ackert, Jr., charged with having criminally received stolen property in the first degree.

Indian Fighter Killed.

More than sixty relatives of Henderson formed a posse and are searching for the murderer.

Police Probing Mystery Death

Body of Miss Lena Lablanc Is Found Near Leominster Lake—Girl Disappeared While Preparing for Her Wedding.

Leominster, Mass., Dec. 21.—State police today began an investigation into the mystery death of Miss Lena Lablanc, 21, who disappeared while preparing for her wedding and whose body was found near the shore of Leominster Lake.

Internal organs of the girl were undergoing a chemical examination today at the office of Dr. Woodward, medical examiner, had first pronounced death due to suicide. At the insistence of the girl's father, John Lablanc, Dr. Woodward performed an autopsy. This was not done however, until Lablanc had deposited $500 to pay for the services of the three physicians performing the autopsy. Later District Attorney Everett Baker, who had accepted Dr. Woodward's first verdict and refused to order an autopsy, stated that if county would reimburse Lablanc.

There were no marks of violence on the body and no water found in the lungs. Relatives of the girl say she was in good spirits when last seen and had everything to live for.

Ernest Williams, fiance of Lena, came from Newark, N. J., where he was searching for the girl on a clue to the girl's disappearance.

Sells His Blood To Go to College

Student Pays His Way Through College With Money Received for Transfusion of Blood to Hospital Patients.

Pittsburgh, Pa., Dec. 21.—To want a college education and to have little or no funds with which to get it is a serious problem in any young man's life; but it's not an insurmountable task as hundreds of college boys are proving in these days by working their way through college. But, to lose an arm before going to college is another matter. Working one's way through under these conditions becomes a nearly hopeless job.

That is what faced J. Milton Goss, of Tyrone, Pa., who wanted to go to college, but had only one arm, and very little money. Goss, however, found a way out. He wanted an education and he wanted to work for it. So he sells his blood to go to college.

On the cold formal records of the Part-Time Employment Bureau at the Carnegie Institute of Technology, Goss is listed as a "transfusion donor." To young Goss, these records mean that he must be on call at all times to give up from 250 c. c. to 300 c. c. of his blood whenever one of the Pittsburgh hospitals needs it to save or prolong the life of a patient.

Altogether, Goss has laid himself upon the operating table seven times in the last two or three years to donate his blood. To save the life of one patient during the summer of 1923, he submitted to the transfusion every six weeks.

For each donation of his blood, Goss is paid $25 on the basis of 250 c. c. If it is necessary to extract a larger quantity, he is paid accordingly.

Goss is a senior in the department of machinery production of the College of Industries. When next June comes around, his financial troubles, he hopes, will be over. He can then sell his services as a college trained man, instead of his blood. But he doesn't feel at all like a martyr about it. He has never had any ill effects from any of his transfusions. In fact, he says, he feels better afterwards and he likes especially to have one near examination time, because, he says, his head feels "clearer."

Incidentally, Goss holds the record for "donations." Merrill R. Thompson, of East Liverpool, Ohio, and Herbert Knappenberger, of Apollo, Pa., also seniors in the College of Industries, sell their blood under similar circumstances. Each is listed as to type for there are four different types according to the quality of the blood, and each is subject to call whenever a doctor decides that his patient needs more blood of a certain quality.

Epworth Leagues' Group Conference

On Washington's Birthday, February 22, the third group of the Kingston District Epworth Leagues will hold a group conference at the Clinton Avenue M. E. Church. Plans are being formulated to make this of great interest to the people of Kingston and the surrounding towns and villages. A fine program is being arranged with some noted speakers.

The third group includes the Young Peoples' Societies of Kingston, Phoenicia, Glenford, West Hurley, Malden, Saugerties, Glasco, Port Ewen, Esopus, Wittenberg, Woodstock, Shady.

The full program of the sessions of the conference will be announced later.

Kingston Radio Fans Find Changes

Station WBAL, Baltimore, which has been interfering with and being interfered with by WGN, Schenectady, has been banished to the jungle of short wave lengths. It is now broadcasting on 240 meters but could be tuned in easily Sunday evening.

Station WGN, Chicago, has evidently swapped wave lengths with Station WJJD, and is using the 302 meter wave length while WJJD is sharing the 370 meter wave length with WEBH.

Station WDBZ succeeded in occupying the entire dial on most receiving sets in Kingston during its testing period Saturday evening.

Sunday was a great day for daylight receiving. One Kingston fan made a record of 22 stations before 6 o'clock, most of them before darkness set in. The stations included Washington, New York, Cincinnati, Louisville, Pittsburgh, Atlanta, Chicago, Philadelphia, Minneapolis and Davenport. All of these were received on a loud speaker.

Station KFI, Los Angeles, can be brought in almost any night when conditions are good, at about 11 o'clock. The dial setting is about midway between WCAE and WCAP, may be brought in on a loud speaker.

Station KLDS, Independence, Mo., is one of the new ones. Its dial position is a trifle higher than that of CNRO.

Station WMBF, Miami Beach, the DX station that could be tuned in during all of last summer, is still on the job every night about 7 o'clock and again at 10. Its dial position is midway between WGY and WTAM.

Kingston's WDBZ should, with 100 watts, have a dependable radius of 200 miles with loud speaker volume. The station at Burlington, Vt., with 50 watts, came in regularly when it was broadcasting last spring.

The Atwater Kent program Sunday night came in better from almost any station than from New York and best from Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Station KTHS, Hot Springs, Arkansas, which few persons in Kingston have been able to tune in, came in Sunday night in the place just vacated by WBAL.

TILLSON.

Tillson, Dec. 21.—The Friends Sunday school will give their Christmas party on Christmas eve. There will be singing recitations and tableaux. The decorations will be very artistic. The offering will be donated to the Near East Relief and for sending Bibles to China. All are invited to come and help in the work, and spend a pleasant evening.

THE WEEK AT RONDOUT PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

Beautiful and impressive Christmas services were held on Sunday in the Rondout Presbyterian Church. In the morning the Sunday school united with the congregation in the morning service and the pastor, the Rev. Dr. Charles G. Ellis, preached a Christmas sermon taking as his topic "His Name." The Sunday school and the church choir sang a number of Christmas anthems and Miss Virginia Los Kamp and Miss La Grange Beattie of New York city sang a duet.

At the afternoon service the choir sang "The Incarnation" by Adam Geibel. The soloists were Miss Beattie, Miss Los Kamp, Harold Brigham and Earl Clum, with an augmented choir. The cantata was one of the most beautifully rendered ever sung in Kingston.

There will be no prayer service in the church on Tuesday evening.

The annual Christmas tree and visit of Santa Claus to the Sunday school will be on Tuesday evening, December 29, in the chapel.

Plans are on foot for a series of union week of prayer services such as was held last year with such success. There will probably be three services, one in the Rondout Presbyterian, one in Trinity M. E. and the third in the Wurts Street Baptist Church.

PETER DUGAN SEIZED WITH HEMORRHAGE IN POST OFFICE

Peter Dugan, janitor of the Rondout post office, while at work at the office this morning was seized with a hemorrhage and fell to the floor with blood streaming from his ears, nose and mouth. A hurry call was sent to the police for the city ambulance and Mr. Dugan was removed to the Kingston City Hospital. His condition later was reported as somewhat improved.

Favors Spanking

MRS. MARY HAMILTON.

Girls from fourteen to twenty are blamed for "appalling vice" conditions in New York, according to Mrs. Mary Hamilton, head of the policewomen's squad. Vicious practices learned at schools and colleges are back of it all, she charges. Spanking would cure the evils, she holds.

Financial and Commercial

New York, Dec. 21.—The market was erratic, irregular and comparatively inactive today. With few exceptions the pool industrials and specialty stocks were entirely featureless.

Postum Cereal reached a new high above 114, for a six point gain, while Chrysler Motor, down 10 points, led the reactionary movement. Fleischmann advanced nine points in inactive trading.

The railroad stocks dropped almost completely out of sight. The motors were irregular, with Hudson's strength offsetting the weakness in Chrysler. The oil stocks made a little better progress particularly the independent oil shares, Sinclair bettered last week's high price and Independent Oil and Gas, Phillips Petroleum, Pan-American, Mid-Continent and Marland scored fractionally.

The mercantile stocks, under the lead of Woolworth, sold at a higher range values, Woolworth advancing four point to 210½. Equipment and public utility stocks were slightly higher. Atlanta, Birmingham and Atlantic, in the low priced rails, sold up to a new high at nine.

Bandit Trio Is Sentenced

Boston, Mass., Dec. 21.—A prison sentence of from 12 to 20 years each was given Frank Golding, John Walsh and Charles Mullen, alleged youthful "touring bandits" when the trio pleaded guilty to robbery while arraigned in municipal court today.

Charles Roper, another alleged "touring bandit" who boasted to police that political friends would keep him out of jail and whose statement started a state wide investigation of bail, nol prossing and defaulting, will be examined by alienists before his arraignment.

The four youths are alleged by police of Greater Boston to have staged no less than 20 daring holdups, several victims being beaten up, as well as robbed.

Registrar of Motor Vehicles Frank A. Goodwin, who since the boast of young Roper has been making public records of cases of criminals being inadequately punished or escaping punishment, today placed records of five more jail dodging cases in the hands of Attorney General Jay R. Benton. Goodwin refused to divulge the names on the ground that the cases might be covered up immediately anywhere along the line.

Huge Planting Program Set

1926 Will Be Great Year For Reforesting Projects—Tree Orders Pouring In From Cities Towns Villages, Clubs and Farmers.

Albany, Dec. 21.—The Conservation Commission is making preparations for the greatest tree planting in the history of reforestation during the coming year.

Last year the demand for young forest trees started early in the spring and continued until the close of the fall planting season taking every tree of planting size in the Commission's nurseries,—ten million and a half. It was the most successful year since the reforesting movement began. Many orders for trees had to be carried over to 1926 as it was impossible to produce planting stock fast enough to supply them.

A special appropriation of $120,000 for reforesting purposes was made by the Legislature of 1925 which enabled the Conservation Commission to treble its nursery output so that there will be thirty million trees available for planting in 1926 and the state will have trees enough to undertake extensive planting in the forest preserve and still fill all orders for trees for planting on privately owned land and in municipal forests.

Last year the demand for Scotch pine and Norway spruce broke all records, orders for these two varieties alone totaling more than six million trees or sixty per cent of the entire output. Scotch pine makes a rapid growth and will thrive on the poorest kind of soil.

It was planted in great quantities by fish and game clubs to furnish cover for game and by cities, towns and villages to protect their water sheds.

To insure a supply to meet all demands for these two varieties, the Commission will have available during the coming year more than fifteen million young trees which it will furnish for $2 per thousand for two-year old seedlings and $4 per thousand for three-year old transplants f. o. b. nursery.

With the spring planting season four months distant, orders already are pouring into the offices of the Conservation Commission from farmers, sportsmen's organizations, cities, towns, villages, industrial concerns and others who are planning to start forests or enlarge forests already started on land that has been lying idle in order to make it produce a profitable forest crop.

Sportsmen who have seen game vanish with the cutting off of forests are joining actively in the movement to insure future hunting by providing suitable forests cover for game and the Fish, Game and Forest League at its annual meeting in Syracuse unanimously adopted a resolution supporting reforestation, urging that it be carried on on a broader scale and directing the president to bring the matter to the attention of the Legislature.

The village of Earlville which planted 25,000 Scotch pines this year already has placed an order for next year for 10,000 Scotch pine and 10,000 Norway spruce. With the order, George E. Bergen, village clerk, filed a report on this year's planting —25,000 trees,—in which he stated that the total cost including express charges on the trees was $170.03, or $6 per acre.

Superintendent L. G. Tuttle of the water department of the village of Sodus, who planted 6,000 trees this year, ordered 7,000 Norway spruce for next spring and reported that last spring's trees had made a promising growth.

Mrs. Fannie C. Chisholm of Delhi, Delaware county, who started a farm forest last spring with 6,000 trees, in ordering 6,000 more for the coming spring reported: "The 6,000 I set in the spring are looking fine."

An important part of the enlarged reforestation program is the proposed planting of all suitable land in the forest preserve by the Conservation Commission just as rapidly as funds are appropriated for that purpose. This year's planting program includes the planting of 6,000 acres of forest preserve land as the first step in the general plan to complete the reforestation of the state's greatest forest area.

McTigue Favored To Beat Flowers

New York, Dec. 21.—Mike McTigue, former light heavyweight champion of the world today, ruled a seven to five favorite to win his ten round scuffle Wednesday night with Tiger Flowers, the Georgia negro.

The fight will be the wind up of the big Christmas fund boxing card at the new Madison Square Garden.

The battle took on added importance this morning when it was announced that the winner will be given a chance to fight Paul Berlenbach for the title in the Garden on the night of February 5.

With an oportunity to get a shot at Berlenbach as an incentive, it is expected that McTigue and Flowers will give all they have Wednesday night.

In the event of a draw, McTigue is expected to be given the chance to fight the champion, as it was to paralyzing Paul that McTigue lost the title at the Yankee Stadium last summer on a rather close decision after 15 rounds of battling. McTigue had won the title from the late Battling Siki in a March 17 battle in Dublin.

It will take all McTigue's science to stave off the negro. Flowers is known as a knockout artist and has put many good men out for the count He is a sensational scrapper in action, making a feature of swinging long lefts and rights from the floor He invariably provides lots of "color" and gives the fans a real run for their money. He typifies action

McTigue, however, is a shrewd, clever man inside the ropes, and will be no target for the negro Mike is the favorite because it is believed by many fans that in this fight there will be no knockout despite the Tiger's reputation, and that if the fight goes the limit McTigue will win on points.

Lost League Game; Won Exhibition

Kingston High School Quintet Forfeits Game to Newburgh Because Mike Palen Was Drawn to Referee Contest—Wins the Exhibition Game 12 to 11.

The Kingston High School basketball team both scalped and was scalped in its second Duso League struggle against Newburgh Academy Saturday afternoon in Newburgh. For the Maroon and White quintet after forfeiting the league game to the Newburghers, battled them in a rip-roaring exhibition match, forcing them to take the 12 to 11 count after a lively extra session match.

Coach O'Leary found an opportunity to uphold his contention that a neutral referee should officiate in all Duso matches as agreed upon in the league rules, and furthermore to carry out his statement that should Mike Palen be drawn to referee another match in which Kingston took part, he would forfeit the game. The local mentor withdrew his team from the Newburgh floor, Saturday, when he learned that the Poughkeepsian had been chosen to officiate in the match.

Then to show the Newburgh fans that Kingston was not a four-flusher outfit the local coach lined up his Maroon and White band against the Newburgh varsity, the locals winning out after a hot and heavy extended combat.

In this match on which the K. H. S. outht and its coach had plenty at stake the local second varsity played the greater part of the game while the Newburgh first team played the entire affair. The two local varsities played a half game each, after which the second varsity fought out the extra period session.

The game had a sorrowful aspect for the Maroon and White the first half for while the enemy registered seven markers the Kingstonians made but a lone point.

In the final half the locals turned on the enemy, steadily cutting down their lead, scoring nine points to Newburgh's three. When the whistle sounded at the end of the second half the score stood ten all, causing an extra five minute period to be played.

Early in the extra period the Newburghers sank a single putting them one point in the lead. From then on the local men were held close and it appeared as if the tilt would end with the enemy on top. But with only fifteen or twenty seconds to play Wonderly tapped the leather to Porter who drove it through the rings just as the final whistle sounded This spectacular shot gave the locals the match by but a single point.

Vogel was the main point gatherer for K. H. S. with two fields and a single. Porter followed with two fields for four markers.

The score.
